Subject: Re: Elon Green, Mark Cohen, Neal Rauhauser
From: Barrett Brown <barriticus@gmail.com>
Date: 7/4/10, 4:12 PM
To: Clark Robinson <robinsonchicago@gmail.com>

Elon Green is also a blogger for Instaputz, incidentally, where he has me on his blog roll. I have just sent him another e-mail. He has already agreed to serve on the blogger network, and I think we can go ahead and put him down for governing network as well, but will confirm that soon.

Cohen isn't a blogger - that's another Mark Cohen. He is a grad student and teacher or some such at Columbia, however, and a friend of mine from NYC. He'll be on the governing network. Also a Japanese speaker and sociologist specializing in Japanese culture, and one of the most erudite people I've ever known.

On Sun, Jul 4, 2010 at 9:23 AM, Clark Robinson <robinsonchicago@gmail.com> wrote:

> Blogger or governing network?
>
> Green:
> Formerly reporter for New York Observer, more recently doing PR and communications consulting at http://www.benabe.com/team.html
>
> Cohen:
> Sociology prof at Columbia, blog: http://stumblingintojews.com/
>
> Rauhauser:
> Based on Googling, appears to be energy activist who writes for Daily Kos and for the local alternative web newspaper in Champaign, IL, about 20 miles from where I am at the moment.
>
> I guess the main thing is to double check to make sure I did not omit anybody distinguished from the list. Can add others later.

--
Regards,

Barrett Brown
Brooklyn, NY
512-560-2302